Item No.2 – DiSC Training by Board Members

Teri Trask from T2 Training administered the DiSC assessment to Board and Cabinet members. The DiSC assessment is a behavior tool based on the DiSC series by William and Martinson’s theory. DiSC theory centers on four different quadrants or categories of behavior styles, which are D for Dominance, I for Influencing, S for Steadiness and C for Compliance.

Dominance relates to control, power and assertiveness.
Influencing relates to social situations between individuals or groups.
Steadiness relates to patience, persistence and thoughtfulness.
Compliance relates to structure and organization.

Through the DiSC assessment the information can be used to help individuals and groups:
- Understand their preferences, strengths, and growth areas
- Appreciate personal diversity
- Develop a common language to discuss personal styles
- Create a dialogue about personal preferences, frustrations and differences
- Relate to those around them

During the course of the training Ms. Trask focused on different leadership messages and styles that coincide with each personality type. This would help Board and Cabinet members become more effective, along with determining the course of action in dealing with situations by taking various aspects of each type into account. At the end of the training Board members thanked Ms. Trask for her presentation.
